This factsheet is for family members, partners and friends – carers – who are affected by someone else’s drug or alcohol use.

You matter too!

Family members and carers of people affected by addiction say that, at times, they feel overwhelmed by all that is happening around them. The chaos of substance misuse and addiction does not just affect the individual but also those close to them. It can feel like being on a rollercoaster; there can be worry, stress and difficult decisions. You can lose sight of who you are as person and what you need, and you may not realise that there is support available.

VOCAL’s Family Support Addictions service provides this support – over the phone and face to face. It is your chance to talk through things from your point of view - offload concerns in a neutral space, discuss how the situation is affecting you and anything you want to change.

Getting support for yourself, in your own right, is a step along the way to feeling less isolated, getting more balance in your life and thinking about the role you want to play in supporting your friend or family member.

Some useful information

Do you know about the Alcohol Charter?
It has been developed by relatives, partners and friends to outline what people should expect when they are supporting someone with an alcohol addiction and working with services such as health and social care.

You can download a copy of the alcohol charter from the VOCAL website: vocal.org.uk/addictions

What are your rights as a family member, partner or friend?
It is important the views of family and friends are considered and valued. Family members often have a detailed, day to day knowledge of the person with the addiction, and they can be affected by decisions about treatment for that person.

As a result NHS Lothian Carer Information Strategy states that carers should be recognised as a key partner in the provision of care and are also entitled to general information about the condition and medication, even if the person who is being cared for does not consent to specific personal information being shared.

Further information on carers’ rights can be found in the factsheet ‘Your rights as a carer’.

Have you been offered support?
You have the right to be offered support for yourself in your own right and as a carer, in addition to receiving relevant information about addiction and possible treatments for the person you are supporting.

‘It’s hard for me too’ booklet
Family Support Addictions has produced a booklet called ‘It’s hard for me too’ which is a self-help guide for family, partners and friends living with the effects of drug or alcohol use.

The booklet explores what is happening to them and the impact and influence they can have.

The booklet is available from VOCAL’s website (www.vocal.org.uk/addictions) or by calling 0131 622 6666.
